

The new site is ready to look at.

Rebuilt around the way buyers actually shop for a factory: the garments and the floor lead, and every page is built to be found in search and quoted by AI assistants.

A working address for review. The finished site moves to sarozthreadz.com, which the company already owns.

Light, and led by the product.

You pointed us at Cheer Sagar, Aman Exports International and BK Fashion. All three are bright, white and photograph-led, because that is what a sourcing manager expects from a womenswear exporter. The previous version was black with orange type — it read as a technology company, and it hid the one thing that sells: the garments.

- ✓ Ivory and ink, with one warm madder accent — the palette of a Jaipur house, not a software company.
- ✓ The floor and the garments take the screen; the reading matter sits beneath, where it is legible.
- ✓ Serif headlines, set sentence case. Authority without shouting.
- ✓ Built for a phone first, because that is where a WhatsApp link opens.

Nothing about the company's facts changed. The machine list, the certifications, the markets and the addresses are exactly as they were — only how they are presented.

“Can you make this?”

Three taps — category, decoration, quantity — and the buyer gets the answer you would give on the phone: whether it is core floor, which machines it runs on, whether the decoration is yours or a partner’s, and what that quantity means commercially.

CORE FLOOR DRESSES

This is the middle of our floor.

Tiered, panelled and gathered dresses are the single largest category we run, and the reason the machine list is weighted the way it is.

✓ Runs on 600 single-needle lockstitch

EMBROIDERY — IN HOUSE

In house. We control the schedule, so embroidery does not sit in a queue at a job worker while your delivery date moves.

500 – 2,000 / STYLE

The sweet spot. Long enough to set a line properly and short enough that we can still hold your delivery date when something changes.

✓ Their selections Send this brief fills the enquiry form in already, and Ask on WhatsApp writes the message for them. Nothing is re-typed.

✓ It answers before they have filled in anything, which is when most enquiries are abandoned.

Knitwear, denim and structured outerwear get a straight refusal.

BEFORE YOU WRITE AN ENQUIRY

Can you make this?

Most factory websites make you send an enquiry to find out. Three taps and you have the answer we would give you on the phone — including a straight no when the style belongs in someone else's factory.

NOT OUR FLOOR

KNITWEAR / JERSEY

No — and you want a knit house, not us.

We are a woven factory. Jersey needs different machines, different needles and different handling, and a woven factory quoting it is guessing. Tiruppur is where that order belongs.

A factory that rules itself out in ten seconds wins the dress order it can actually deliver, and never loses three weeks of both sides' time on one it cannot. Buyers remember the factory that told them the truth, and they come back with the right enquiry.

Please read these four refusals before the site goes public. They commit the company in writing — including naming Tiruppur for knitwear, and saying there is no denim laundry on site. If any of it is wrong, it is a small change.

WhatsApp, everywhere on the site.

Your desk runs on WhatsApp, so it is now on the front page, inside the qualifier, in a block that names you, and on a bar that follows the buyer down every page. Enquiries reach you directly — there is no agent and no shared inbox in between.

The enquiry form asks only for what is needed to give a real number rather than a range: company, name, email, category, quantity per style and a delivery window.

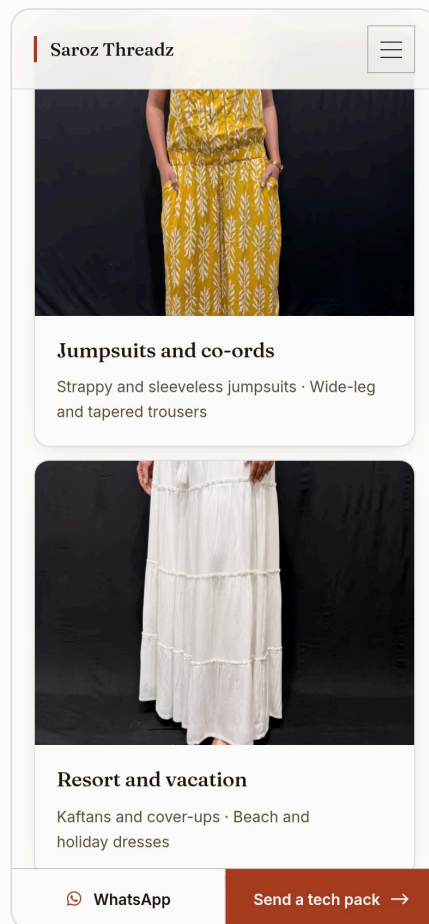

Most buyers will open this from a WhatsApp message.

The floor takes the screen

Garments straight after

The qualifier, tap-sized

Every page is built for a phone first: full-width buttons, WhatsApp always within reach, and pages that load quickly on an ordinary connection.

— TO FINISH IT

Three things only you can give us.

1 · Photographs of the floor

This is the biggest gap. Every picture we have is a garment on a model. There is not one wide shot of the 200,000 sq. ft. floor with the lines running — the image a buyer actually wants, and the one thing the site claims but cannot show. A half day with a photographer fixes it: the sewing floor, the embroidery machines running, the cutting and pattern rooms, QA and finishing, the worker canteen — and a portrait of you and the family.

2 · The numbers buyers screen on

Minimum order quantity per style, monthly capacity, sampling lead time, bulk lead time, headcount. Each one currently reads "on request", which is honest but costs enquiries. Even a range is worth more than nothing.

3 · One client name we may print

"Global fashion brands" is weak. One named brand that permits it is worth more than the rest of the page.
